Her books include the novel Clearcut; River of Words: Portraits of Hudson Valley Writers (with photographer Jennifer May), and a growing posse of pseudonymous books for young readers. A graduate of Wesleyan, she is currently teaching creative writing at Manhattanville College. Nina lives in New York's Hudson Valley, where she has been books editor of Chronogram magazine since 2004.

This is a great read for anyone interested in playwriting. Published in 1997 with plays written by now famous playwrights including Christopher Durang, John Augustine, Tony Kushner, David Mamet, David Ives, John Guare, August Wilson and more, lends insight into how they may have begun their careers. There are some playwrights in this book unknown to me whose works are also wonderful and inspiring.

Good for class studies.

This package arrived on the earliest expected arrival date which was nice because I'm leaving for college soon! The condition of the book was like it had just been taken out of plastic wrap; the book was so shiny I could see my face in it. I'm very pleased with how my order process went but remember to check USPS not UPS for tracking information regarding your order.

Nice book, good condition...not exactly what I was looking for...I wanted plays that were more geared to seniors, some humor, nostalgia..etc....but it is a good book...perfect for "someone". (: Thanks!!

class requirement. arrived in expected condition.

Not bad for short plays.

Love this book, my high school theater teacher had it, and I had been looking for it at a good price for a while.

A good choice
