Historic Walks In And Around York: 25 Leisurely Country And City Rambles

Synopsis

York is one of the UK's favorite cities: a beautiful historical center that is both a destination in its own right and an excellent base for touring the delights of the surrounding region. As well as York itself, there are too many to name but a few – Harrogate, Beverley, Ripon, Castle Howard, the Leeds & Liverpool Canal, castles, abbeys and many picturesque villages, all just a short drive or bus ride away. Whether you fancy the grandeur of a stately home, castle or cathedral, the atmospheric site of a bloody battle, or a peaceful riverside amble, there really is something in this book for you. And while you enjoy the walk, stand to admire the views and relax in one of the many cafes en route, nuggets of historical information are provided to add interest and variety. The routes in Historic Walks in and around York are all short and manageable, ideal for all ages and abilities, with enough variety and interest to satisfy everyone. In short, this lovely book really is all you need to have a grand day out all year round.

BRIAN CONDUIT was born in Birmingham and educated at the universities of Birmingham and Nottingham. After a career teaching and lecturing in history, he began writing walking guides and over the last 20 years he has had over 30 books published. He likes combining walking with his other great interest history- and many of his walks reflect this, incorporating wherever possible prehistoric remains, Roman villas, castles, abbeys, cathedrals, stately homes and industrial monuments.

This well organized book details 25 walks you can take in the York, England, area in city and country for beautiful and fun rambling. Each section shows the walk outlined, the length, time required, description of the terrain, how and where to park or to get public transportation to the area. Brian Conduit even tells the facilities for bathrooms and snacks in the area. The book refers to OS Explorer Map by number. You will see lovely photos of the places that make the walk worthwhile and enjoyable and details of things to observe along the way.
